MOONLIT MOVIE NIGHTS

Nothing says summer in the Eternal City like a movie under the stars (preferably with a gelato in hand). This month, piazzas, lush villas, and even a lake transform into open-air cinemas, showing everything from classic flicks, to kid-friendly favorites, to new releases—all in full compliance with anti-covid measures. Here are our top picks of outdoor flicks in the city.

The free movie festival “Il Cinema in Piazza,” has returned to Rome for its 8th year. It will be hosted in three locations: Piazza San Cosimato, Monte Ciocchi, Casale della Cervelletta. This summer Cinema in Piazza has prepared 104 nights of movies and events, many of which will also feature special guests presenting and discussing the films. The films will be shown on 12x8-meter large screens, in original language with Italian subtitles. Free entry with no reservation required.

Casa del Cinema will host its outdoor film festival Caleidoscopio at Teatro Ettore Scola.

Three months of free open-air evenings dedicated to the stars of Italian and international cinema in the evocative setting of Villa Borghese, and in particular to the great actors Ugo Tognazzi and Vittorio Gassman: special evenings will be dedicated to them in honor of their centenary. Caleidoscopio will host 6 international movies festival dedicated to Albania, Bulgaria, Israel, Ireland, India and Africa. Entrance is free.

The 10th edition of Sotto le Stelle dell'Austria dedicated to the best of contemporary Austrian cinema, awaits you in the beautiful garden of the Austrian cultural Institute until July 6. Reservations are mandatory via email.

Cinema al Maxxi is back with its 10th edition, focusing on two formats: Explore (a selection of the most surprising and innovative Italian movies) and Video Essay Film Festival (VEFF) dedicated to new forms of film criticism. Movies will be displayed in the square in front of Maxxi Museum. Entrance fee: €5.

This year, L'Isola del Cinema's annual film festival returns in presence to entertain Rome and its visitors in the picturesque setting of the Tiber island. From 21 June to 3 September, the International cinema festival proposes an exciting review of Italian and foreign titles.

Quo vadis? is the review which celebrates historical movies: from 1 to 10 July great movies will be screened to rediscover the charm of antiquity under the stars in the splendid setting of the Temple of Venus and Roma (entrance from Piazza del Colosseo). Book your spots at eventbrite.it/

TITIAN, DIALOGUES OF NATURE AND LOVE

An exhibition- dossier on Titian's journey around the themes of Nature and Love

This summer, there is even more reason to get lost in the wonders of Borghese Gallery. From 14 June to 18 September, visitors can admire one of the latest works from Titian, Nymph and Shepherd, which has arrived in Rome as part of an exchange programme between museums. The temporary addition of the Nymph and Shepherd has prompted a reflection on Titian's works through the years and visitors are invited to take a journey on a thematic path that witnesses nature and love as the main protagonists. Several works of Titian are already present in Gallery Borghese: the masterpieces Sacred and Profane Love (1514) and Venus Blindfolding Cupid (1565) and, opposite to Nymph and Shepherd, there is on display a prestigious copy of The Three Ages of Man by Giovan Battista Salvi known as Sassoferrato (1682).

Nature as an indication of the internal landscape

The landscapes of Titian serve to communicate the concept of the painting itself, as an extension of the inner dimension of the human characters portrayed in the canvas.

On the painting Sacred and Profane Love, the two female figures standing between little flowers on a green lawn are framed by a celestial rural landscape, relaying the idea of calm and beauty. On the other side of the hall, the Nymph and the Shepherd are laying down on the earth soil surrounded by a vegetation which is deteriorating.

A reference to Titian's origins, the mountains of Pieve di Cadore, can be spotted in Nymph and Shepherd— perhaps as a little sign of hope and lightness which can be found again in Venus blindfolding Cupid.

On the occasion of this exhibition, a catalogue curated by Maria Giovanna Sarti, presents for the first time the results of a research on Venus blindfolding Cupid. The study revealed that, instead of a human figure originally placed between Venus and the woman on her right, Titian added a mountain surrounded by a dusty pink sky, a clue revealing the importance of Nature for Titian.

The theme of love through time and allegories

Love appears in Titian's painting in its different forms: divine, as a nymph, and by a young girl or a bride. In The Three Ages of Man, whose original is in Edinburgh, the narration is built around feelings of love and passion. The artist represents the idea of the life cycle in allegorical terms. Childhood and manhood are synonymous with terrestrial love, and old age close to death are drawn realistically as each figure reflects Titian's attitudes toward each stage of earthly existence in relation to love.
